About the job

As an Associate Product Marketing Manager (APMM) Intern, you'll be assigned a marketing project within a specific product area, directly contributing to its business goals. Your responsibilities will vary based on the project, but may include:

- Bringing user insights into the product development process.
- Driving product launch awareness and adoption.
- Defining and executing go-to-market strategies (including social and digital campaigns).
- Measuring campaign success against KPIs.
- Developing customer acquisition and engagement programs (e.g., strategy, messaging, collateral, events).

Following the internship, interns may be considered for full-time roles in the APMM Program, continuing to support the same product area or region. The APMM Program, Google's early-career marketing program, allows you the opportunity to develop a breadth of marketing skills, join a community of peers and alumni and be supported by dedicated mentors and executive leaders. In addition to their core work, APMMs are expected to complete learning and development milestones, attend APMM programming and actively contribute to the APMM community.

Know the user. Know the magic. Connect the two. At its core, marketing at Google starts with technology and ends with the user, bringing both together in unconventional ways. Our job is to demonstrate how Google's products solve the world's problems--from the everyday to the epic, from the mundane to the monumental. And we approach marketing in a way that only
